WEATHER OF CONCERN

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

- A Winter Storm Warning is in effect for the mountain and foothill regions of multiple Northern California counties.
- A major snow producing storm will move into the northern Sierra on Tuesday with snow levels lowering into the foothills. Several (1-4) feet of snow accumulation is expected, which will put a serious wrench in holiday travel planned across the mountains Tuesday and Wednesday.
 - The heaviest snowfall is likely Tuesday night into Wednesday morning (hourly snow accumulation rates of 2-3 inches) as upslope flow ramps up and mid-level lapse rates steepen.
 - Snow will keep on accumulating Wednesday and Wednesday night, though likely at a slower rate.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

- A Red Flag Warning will be in effect Monday from 1000 hours until 1900 hours for Inyo and Tulare Counties.
- A High Wind Warning in effect Monday and Tuesday for portions of Del Norte, Inyo, Kern, Los Angeles, Riverside, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, and Ventura Counties.
- A Winter Storm Warning is in effect for the mountain and foothill regions of multiple Southern California counties.
- A Flash Flood Watch remains in effect from late Tuesday night through Thursday evening.
 - Portions of southwest California, including Orange County, Coastal Areas, Orange County Inland Areas, San Bernardino, Riverside County Valleys, The Inland Empire, San Diego County Coastal Areas, San Diego County Valleys, Santa Ana Mountains, and Foothills.
 - Rainfall rates in excess of a half an inch per hour are possible in the heaviest showers and isolated thunderstorms, which could result in flash flooding.
 - Locally heavy rainfall could produce flash flooding, with the greatest threat in steep terrain, especially in and below recently burned areas.
 - Flooding of poorly drained and urban areas will also occur, presenting a hazard for motorists.

WEATHER KEY POINTS

11/25/19 - 12/01/19

Monday

- High surf is expected along the coast, and there is the potential for minor coastal flooding Monday through Wednesday
- Strong, gusty winds are expected across much of the state today and tonight
 - This will bring elevated to briefly critical fire weather conditions, though relative humidity is higher than in many recent events
 - There is the potential for tree/property damage with these winds in some locations

Tuesday-Friday

- A large and cold storm system will move through the state Tuesday through Friday, bringing widespread precipitation and gusty winds
 - Holiday travel will be significantly impacted, including accumulating snow at most mountain passes
 - The most significant impacts will be Tuesday night into Wednesday across the northern Sierra and other mountains across northern California, and Wednesday into Thursday across the southern Sierra and southern mountains
 - Lowest snow levels across the state generally expected to be 1500-2500 feet, though shorter periods of snow levels below 1000 feet are possible in the northern half of the state
 - Interstate 5 near Grapevine could be one of the areas impacted by accumulating snow Wednesday afternoon through Friday
 - Brief heavy rain could lead to flash flooding and burn scar impact concerns, especially in Southern Region, though impacts are not currently expected to be widespread
 - Cold temperatures are expected with this storm, especially Wednesday night through Saturday, including the possibility of freezing temperatures in Coastal Region
 - Strong, gusty winds could lead to travel impacts and tree/property damage, especially Tuesday and Wednesday

Saturday-Sunday

- The storm will exit the state to the east, but the next storm may move into California late Saturday into Sunday
